AUTHOR SELF-ARCHIVING POLICY

European Papers – A Journal on Law and Integration aims to offer a real and immediate open access for academic work (see European Papers “Open Access Statement”). The publication of the results of a scientific research is a highly complex procedure, which imposes to all the subjects involved (Board of Editors and Editorial Committee of European Papers, Reviewers and Authors) with particular rigor and accuracy (see European Papers “Code of Ethics”, adopted in conformity with the COPE Guidelines and Core Practices, and European Papers “Policy Screening for Plagiarism”). Furthermore, European Papers adopts the following “Author Self-archiving Policy”.

The Author(s) original version is defined here as the un-refereed Author(s) version of a paper that is considered by the Author(s) to be of sufficient quality to be submitted to European Papers for formal peer review. The Author(s) accepts full responsibility for the paper, which may have a version number or date stamp, and content and layout of which is set out by the Author(s).

The accepted manuscript is defined here as the final draft author manuscript, as accepted for publication by European Papers, including modifications based on referees’ suggestions, before it has undergone copy-editing and proof correction.

Original version of a paper submitted to European Papers for formal peer review cannot be uploaded to publicly-available websites, even before the submission.

Only accepted manuscript in pdf format can be uploaded to an institutional and/or centrally organized repository, provided that public availability is delayed after the end of the double-blind peer-review.

When uploading an accepted manuscript to a repository, Authors should include (e.g. in the first footnote) the following acknowledgment as well as a link to European Papers website (www.europeanpapers.eu), where the final version of the paper will be published. This will guarantee that the final version of paper is readily available to those accessing the article from public repositories, and means that the article is more likely to be cited correctly.

“This is a pre-copyedited, author-produced version of a paper accepted for publication in European Papers – A Journal on Law and Integration (www.europeanpaper.eu) following peer review. The final version of the paper [insert complete information here [see European Papers Official Citation]] will be available on-line at: [insert URL that the Author will receive upon request by the EP Managing Editors (submission@europeanpapers.eu) here]”.

Once the paper is published, the URL of the final authoritative version on the European Papers website must be inserted in the aforementioned acknowledgment.

Any original or pre-print (pre-copyedited, author-produced) versions of the accepted manuscript should be removed by the Author(s) upon publication of his/her/their paper in European Papers. After the publication of the paper, Authors are not permitted to retain the original or pre-print (pre-copyedited, author-produced copy) version of their accepted manuscript on publicly-available websites.
